Training caregivers of children under the age of three, the world-renowned QIC workshop is based on research and theory in social-emotional, cognitive, motor, sensory, and language development. This course, which may be taken for graduate or undergraduate credit, or audited, consistently draws participants from around the world. Lectures include observations and interactions with real infants, as well as videos and demonstrations of developmentally appropriate toys and games. Lead faculty for the QIC workshop is Alice Sterling Honig, Ph.D., professor emerita of child development at Syracuse University, who has authored the following textbooks that used in the QIC:

- Infant Care Giving: A Design for Training (with J.R. Lally)
- Talking With Your Baby: Family as the First School (with H. Brophy)
- Behavior Guidelines for Infants and Toddlers
- Playtime Learning Games for Young Children
- Secure Relationships: Nurturing Infant/Toddlers in Early Care Settings

In 2010, Dr. Honig published, Little Kids, Big Worries: Stress-Busting Tips for Early Childhood Classrooms, a new guidebook for early childhood professionals to help them address common causes of stress in a young child's life. She began teaching the QIC workshop more than 30 years ago. She is a licensed New York State psychologist and has authored and/or edited more than a dozen books and 500 articles and chapters. She has led childcare training throughout the United States and other countries, including South Korea, Singapore, France, China and Australia. Additional faculty will include:

- Tom Fiscoe, CPA, Vice President, Dannible & McKee Accounting
- Ann Sveen, M.D., Professor of Pediatrics, SUNY Upstate Medical University
- Mary Anne Theiss, R.N., M.S., J.D.
